

Librarian's Report
Freedom Public Library
December 3, 2019

We now have eight new Dell computers. We replaced all five of the public computers, the two at the front desk and mine. Although we hired Joel Clement to install them all, I worked with him all day Monday, November 18 and put in a number of additional hours that week to correct inconsistencies and make sure that the software that keeps people from changing settings on the computers was working correctly. There are still a few more things to sort out but we'll be all set soon.

We had a great Afterschool/Pizza & Movie day last month and 19 people came for a really fun Game Night. This week we have a Cricut workshop with Bonnie Burroughs later tonight, a talk on Thursday evening by David Lee Black, the photographer currently exhibiting, and a book folding workshop with Amanda on Saturday. Pizza & Movie will be December 13 and the December Game Night is the 17th. I'm pleased we have so much going on.

Freedom Rings in the Holidays got us going on decorating the library. Amanda made a lovely display in the lobby of items we have for sale and she and Ann Pierce did other holiday decorating. We opened the book room last week for a self-service book sale which made an additional $110 for the Friends of the Library. Claire has found a company which will take all the books. They are coming in the next couple of weeks – and then that space will be empty!

Sincerely,
